Core values

Core values represent the durable and supporting qualities that shape and guide all activities that the National Public Health Institute of Liberia will undertake.

- Ethics and integrity: The NAC upholds generally accepted high standards of ethical behavior. All those involved with the NAC conduct themselves in a professional manner that reflects favorably on the institute and the Government of Liberia.
- Transparency: The NAC communicates honestly and openly about its activities, their results, their impacts on the health outcomes of Liberians, and the budget and finances of the Institute.
- Accountability: The NAC sets high expectations for its performance, all those involved take responsibility for what they do, and they demonstrate that they use the resources entrusted to the Institute to serve the people of Liberia.
- Partnership focus: The NAC recognizes that sustainable success involves collaboration – among the staff of the Institute, with other agencies of the Government of Liberia, with communities, and with external partners -- based on mutual trust and respect, a shared vision and goals, commitment, and active participation by all involved.
- Quality: The NAC leads and/or delivers high-quality programs, services, knowledge, and expertise.
- Rights:
- Productivity: The NAC generates tangible results that contribute to prevention and control of HIV and AIDS in Liberia.
- Innovation: The NAC is a coordinating and/or management institution that takes pride in the ability and willingness of its staff to initiate innovative approaches that contribute to achieving the institute's mission.
